

WRITING ARCHITECTURE TROPHY | 2023-2024

Creative write up with illustrations.

A society that is diverse, tolerant and provides equal opportunities ,to enhance the principles ,of a good quality of life by ensuring access to services and facilities ,for all age groups of society ,we create a stable ,resilient and inclusive society that is adaptive to change and challenges of time.

Balancing and keeping a stable economy of 141 crores and a still-growing population ,requires large-scale infrastructure projects ,which demand strategic planning. Priority to inclusive urban development and housing that is sustainable and affordable should be a key goal. To engage local communities and meet spatial needs ,we could make use of spaces under flyovers and border a massive change in how we use the water defence passages ,that line or surround waterbodies like a lake, river or even the oceanfront. These spaces are designed inclusively with multifunctionality as a front, last for long-term benefits and improve standards of living. They foster a United society amongst India's demographic challenges.

This type of intricate and logical planning that's inclusive is what demands the role of Architects' ,who can indeed be instrumental in fostering harmonious societies and surroundings. Urban planning that has been thoughtful to reduce segregation will promote unity. Affordable and sustainable Green projects etc. can bring major change in how architects can intrigue the society and bring balance to how the community interacts.

To prepare young architects for this major task of being responsible for unifying societies , we need a well-rounded education that should balance technical proficiency with good ethos.

RESEARCH BASED ESSAY

Social Equity ensures that there is no partiality between the haves and have nots. It stands for justice for all the people in the society, in order to create a society which is better for living. It ensures that people have the same access to opportunities (equitable educational and economic opportunities).

Architecture has helped to shape the society by providing custom living spaces that ensures comfort, good health and safety. Architectural design shapes lives, it should be designed in such a way that it treats all the users equally (irrespective of different socio-economic status, genders and ethnicities). The designs should put people first, learning about the people we are designing for.

Design must be more adaptable for multi-generational households that can attract Africans, Latino families, etc. Rethinking Universal designs, shared spaces (open, semi-covered or closed) to encourage communication adds up to the factors for equitable architecture.

Universal Design was termed by an American architect, Ronald Mace, who focuses on accessible housing which is a barrier free design. These design strategies that welcome everyone regardless of their gender, castes etc.

The aim of an effective urban community is achieved only when the user groups, are allowed to enjoy and experience the space and the urban amenities in their original identities without any fear, feeling of insecure.

Architects need to design low-cost housing of these communities who are in need of good houses. Architects at the same time, should think of sustainable ideas to reduce the overall cost of buildings.
